

To the Commission:

As the owner of an HDTV, I feel that selecteable output control and analog downrezzing should not be allowed. Hollywood wants to insiste on encrypted digital interconnections for high definition content. The proper time to add such a requirement was five years ago, when the Grand Alliance was still formulating the ATSC standard. It would be a real shame if Hollywood were allowed to disenfranchise the first 3 million owners of HDTV sets by crippling analog connections for HDTV. Such a move would harm the early adopters and cast a dark shadow over the entire transition to digital television.

Sincerely,

James Graham
